"Our ancestors, though not perfect and infallible in all respects, were a brave, religious, and virtuous set of men, whose love of liberty, civil and religious, brought them from their native land into the American desert."

INTRODUCING FLORA ALMA McINTIRE WYMAN

Flora Alma McIntire Wyman has had a long and interesting life. It has not been a life of excitement or adventure but has been one of varied and absorbing interests. She was born on February 26, 1865, in a log house on a newly cleared farm in what was then the wilderness of northern Maine. The place later became the town or Perham in Aroostook County. From her environment as well as from her parents she learned resourcefulness, co-operation and civic consciousness. Life is not easy on any frontier but there was much to interest an eager child and under the guidance of her mother and father she learned at an early age to identify herself with her surroundings and to find enjoyment wherever she was.

Social and cultural interests were not lacking. In addition to meetings of the neighbors for worship there were Sunday afternoon gatherings for music when everyone, adults and children alike, sang the songs which were current then. The singing was in four part harmony and if the songs were new they were learned part by part and by note. "Allie" as she was called then, learned to sing by note almost as soon as she could talk. In her home there was the music of her father's violin as well as the singing of both parents. There were also good books and her father subscribed for a few good magazines. One of these was "The Youth's Companion" which she read in her childhood and continued to read as long as it was published. In later years she made the acquaintance of Dr. C. A. Stephens, a frequent contributor to this magazine and found him as delightful a person as his stories had suggested he might be. A book which meant a great deal to her was given to her by her father as a prize for completing certain studies within a given time. This was "The Child's Book of Nature" by Worthington Hooker. The interest in plant and animal life as well as in natural sciences which began in this way has never abated.

In those days in rural communities schools were held for a few weeks usually during summer and winter, but between these terms there were many weeks without any school. Allie attended school whenever one was held in Perham and later went to school in the nearby towns of Washburn and Caribou and in New Sharon when the family spent a year there with her grandparents. Although Perham was a small place, men of ability and experience frequently taught there. Between terms, her father, who was a fine teacher himself, supervised her studying. In the ungraded schools which she attended the children could hear what was being taught to the more advanced classes and so made more rapid progress themselves. When she was fourteen she taught her first term of school in a new district of Perham. It is of interest that she used the money she earned in this way to buy a small reed organ which she learned to play. When, in the fall of 1883, she entered the Edward Little High School in Auburn for a year of study, she found that her studying had covered nearly the whole high school course. For the two years following her year at Edward Little she taught in Perham, Washburn, Mapleton and a summer term in Peru, Maine. Although her formal education stopped in the spring of 1884 she has continued to study one subject or another all her life. For example:—while her family was growing up she went to Boston, as she had opportunity, to study French with Parisian teachers, keeping it up until she became proficient in it. Later she studied Esperanto until she uses that language fluently also. She became and still is an ardent advocate of and worker for the introduction and use of this language as a means toward better international understanding.

In Peru she met Windsor Herbert Wyman of that town, at that time a student at the Newton Theological Institution in Newton Centre, Mass. On May 27, 1886, when he had just been graduated they were married at the home of a friend in Georgetown, Mass., where Mr. Wyman had been the student pastor of the Baptist Church. He accepted the pastorate of the Baptist Church of Winchendon, Mass., where they made their first home and where they stayed from 1886 until 1890. It is significant of her personality that today, sixty years after they left Winchendon, she still keeps in touch with friends made when she went to that town as a bride. Her husband's second pastorate was in North Abington, Mass., and there, too, she entered into the life and work of the church. Although Mr. Wyman left the ministry in 1894 to give his entire time to the Bay State Nurseries which he had started in 1893 they continued to live in North Abington and were active in the work of the church and in the community. Mr. and Mrs. Wyman were both very much interested in missions and through their efforts the First Baptist Church became so mission conscious that even today it is known as "The Missionary Church" because of its large contributions of materials and money for missions. Mrs. Wyman's ability and zeal were recognized outside of her home church and she served on the Massachusetts and the New England Baptist Missionary Boards. The Sunday-school and the Ladies' Social Club of the church also received the benefits of her vision, enthusiastic leadership and support.

In addition to caring for her home and family she found time to study stenography and typing in order to help her husband in his business and for the first ten years was his only office assistant. She learned to identify plants and knew their botanical names. She can spell them, too. She was one of the founders of the Abington Visiting Nurse Association and held important offices in that organization until it was well established. She served a term as president of the Abington Afternoon Club and still holds membership in it, is a member of the Whitman chapter of the D.A.R., was a trustee of the public library for many years and for several years was a member of the Woman's City Club of Boston and of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society. Her interest in genealogical research extending over many years has resulted in this compilation of her ancestry. With her husband she travelled extensively in this country and in the winter of 1910 she accompanied him on a business trip to Europe. It was characteristic of both Mr. and Mrs. Wyman that wherever they went they were interested to learn all they could about the places they visited and to keep in touch with the friends they made in each.

After her husband's death in 1935 Mrs. Wyman continued to live in the home they had built at 411 Adams St., North Abington, until 1941 when she sold it and moved to a small house on the nursery grounds. She continues to spend the winter in Melrose, Florida, in the home which they bought in 1929. She has identified herself with the life of that community. She is a regular attendant at church services and as a member—and later the president—of the Ladies' Literary and Debating Society (now re-named Melrose Woman's Club) she infused new life into the club, which is one of the oldest in Florida, having been organized in 1890. Each summer she spends a few weeks at "The Ledges," the home on Staples Hill in Canton, Maine, which she and her husband built in 1907.

But it is not chiefly because of her keen mind, her executive ability nor her interest in worthy causes that she is beloved by friends and family alike but for her humanness, her ready sympathy and understanding, her generosity, her interest in people as individuals and her whimsical humor. Her friends extend from small children to persons of her own generation and to each she is someone quite special. One great-granddaughter objects to having her called "Grandmother" the name by which she is generally called and insists that she be called "Great-grandmother" partly because few little girls have great-grandmothers but also because this one is especially nice. She was pleased and touched when a thirty year old grandson in inviting her to make him and his family "a good long visit" added "We like to have you around." Surely it is more than duty which has prompted this grandson to watch over her needs whenever possible and take as his particular responsibility the care of her car, to see that it has been kept at its maximum efficiency. "I remember," said a classmate of one of her daughters, "when I used to go on bird walks with your mother. She was so interested in the birds and made us interested in them, too." She enters into the interests of her youngster friends with as much pleasure as those of her own generation and enjoys opening up new vistas for them. She was and is a charming companion, a good talker with something to say and an interesting and witty way of saying it, an equally good listener and a safe confidante.

Although the Wymans did little formal entertaining their door was hospitably open and persons from many walks of life and many countries enjoyed at one time or another a family meal with them or spent the night or longer. Mrs. Wyman was always a great reader and has shared this interest with others by reading aloud to them. To her husband she read each week "The Watchman," a Baptist church paper, and "The Outlook" when it was edited by Lyman Abbott and other magazines of current interest. Her husband did not care for fiction so she read with him books of biography, history, travel, philosophy and essays. "The Jungle Books," "Swiss Family Robinson," "A Tale of Two Cities," "David Copperfield," "Our Mutual Friend," Nansen's "Farthest North"—to mention only a few—are books which her children remember with special interest because she read them aloud. She has never been a professional musician but she played her reed organ and later the piano and she sang —especially as she went about her work. Her taste is for classical music. Occasionally she composed a bit of music. The music for the Abington Woman's Club hymn was written by her. When she was tired and unable to get away for a vacation she would take up some new interest to furnish recreation. This is standard practice now but when Mrs. Wyman was an active homemaker it was a new idea. One summer when things at home had been unusually tiring she bought a lace loom and learned to make bobbin lace. Another time she learned the botanical names of all the flowers in the vicinity of a vacation home to add interest to an extremely hot spell. No doubt if you were to ask her today what Blackeyed Susan is or goldenrod she would reply promptly "Rudbeckia hirsuta" or "Solidago canadensis." Long before industrial engineers had popularized the word efficiency she practiced it. "Let your head save your heels" she frequently admonished her children and she followed her own advice. Her generosity has not been confined to sharing her means with others and she has done this freely. She has put herself into her gift as well. She opened the eyes of one of her children who objected to the tiring work she was doing through the period of the first world war by saying quietly "You don't give much if you give nothing of yourself." No characterization of her would be complete which did not mention her deeply religious nature. It permeates everything she is and does.

A study of this genealogy which she entitles "A Typical New England Ancestry" will show that many of her ancestors were just ordinary folks, many were above the average in ability and achievements and some were outstanding. From them she inherited those traits which, combined with her response to her environment, have made her what she is today—a wholly delightful person.

FLORENCE WYMAN CALKINS

Lexington, Mass.
July, 1950.

WINDSOR HERBERT WYMAN, son of Elisha Smith and Matilda K. (Barstow) Wyman, was born in Peru, Oxford Co., Maine, April 14, 1857. He studied at Hebron and Waterville academies and for two years at Colby College. On April 14, 1880, he married in Canton, Maine, Mabel Frances Dearborn, daughter of John Calvin and Amanda (Fuller) Dearborn, who was born in Canton June 1858 and died there of consumption in October, 1881.

After an interval of teaching, he entered Newton Theological Institution, Newton Centre, Mass., from which he was graduated in 1886. On May 27 of the same year he married Flora Alma McIntire of Perham, Maine. Some months earlier he had accepted the pastorate of the Baptist church in Winchendon, where he was ordained on the 24th of June. (Rev. Samuel F. Smith, author of "America," was one of the clergymen to have part in the ordination service.)

In June, 1890, he closed his pastorate in Winchendon but in late November took that of the church in North Abington, Mass. (This church had invited him more than four years earlier, but at that time he had already promised to go to Winchendon.) Here he held the pastorate till midsummer, 1894.

In the season of 1893 he had started the Bay State Nurseries in North Abington; having, in earlier years, been a salesman for a leading nursery company, in whose Boston office he had also been employed. Though he did not accept another regular pastorate, he was of assistance to many churches of that region; often preaching when there was no pastor; helping to gather up scattered forces when changing population had thinned the ranks; or encouraging them to a united financial effort in case of hampering debt.

The business expanded and in 1910 he bought the Framingham Nursery after the death of its owner, Mr. W. B. Whittier. In connection with the business he traveled widely in this country, and prior to 1914 made five trips to Europe, to select choice nursery stock which, at that time, could be freely imported. These trips were also a means of recreation as well, which his education and background had fitted him to enjoy.

Mr. Wyman's resignation from the pastorate did not terminate his connection with the church; for as long as he was able, he attended its services regularly and was an active worker as well as a generous contributor. His generosity to other worthy causes included financial help to many deserving students.

His activities in Abington outside of the church included membership on various town committees, and he served one term as representative of the legislature, declining, however, to become a candidate for re-election. After his retirement, he and his wife spent their winters traveling or in the Florida home they had bought in 1929. He died from cancer, at his home in North Abington, August 2, 1935, and is buried in Mt. Vernon Cemetery.

PREFACE AND EXPLANATIONS

When these records were begun it seemed that only a few typed copies, for the immediate family, would be needed; but as time passed and the records were expanded and further data added, many other relatives became interested.

This is not a history of the descendants of one person, but quite the reverse: a tracing (so far as time and other circumstances have permitted) of the lines of ancestry leading back from one individual to the early 1600s, when extensive immigration began from countries of western Europe to the shores of New England. Beyond that it has not been my purpose to go.

The records are far from complete, but the main object has been attained. The general background has been established and many family lines traced. Anyone who may be interested to do so can easily take up the threads and carry on further research. Much material is available for such study, as suggested (in part) by references throughout this book which show the authority for the statements made herein.

The loose-leaf form is used, as it gives space for additional data. It is simply an adaptation of the genealogical chart, the page numbers corresponding to those of the chart.

To use the book, take the name AT THE HEAD of any page: the name of his or her father (if known) will be found on the page of double that number. For instance: page 2 shows the father of page 1 and, in turn, page 4 shows the father of page 2. Extending this, the paternal family line follows pages 2, 4, 8, 16, etc., the number doubling with each succeeding generation.

It will be noted that in every case the name of the wife, if known, heads the page opposite that of the husband; that while his is an even number, hers is uneven and also introduces a new family line whose page numbers may be followed in the same way. Thus, if one's father heads page 2, the mother's page is 3 and her family line is 6, 12, 24, 48, and so on. An index is given, but it is interesting to note how quickly one becomes familiar with certain series of numbers in identifying family lines.

Names of the children of any couple are usually recorded on the wife's page; the reason being that, as a rule, more information is found about the husband than the wife, and more available space is therefore left on her page. In a few cases where the name of the wife is not known and only one child is recorded, its name has been placed on the husband's page. (This does not affect the sequence of pages.) NOTE that the name of the child through whom the descent (ascent) is carried is in capitals, and is accompanied by his or her own page number for easy reference.

A blank page means simply that data are not yet in hand for the person who (whose name) should head that page, and a gap of several or many pages means the same. If further records are found and a page should be inserted, much care must be taken to have the page numbers in correct sequence, to prevent confusion. Test by the rule already given.

Also, be careful not to duplicate a page. For instance: no data are in hand for the parents of page 22. Should their names be found, pages 44 and 45, having material on the reverse side, are already numbered and no new leaf is needed.

The kind allowance of the reader is asked for such errors and inconsistencies as will be noted.

CHARLES SMITH McINTIRE

Capt. Henry, Jr. and Eunice (Field) McIntire

Born New Sharon, Franklin Co., Maine, Mar. 2, 1840.

Married Perham,* Maine, Apr. 19, 1864, Ella F. Moody, by Robert Wilder, J. P., Washburn.

He lived in Perham, the pioneer settlement in Aroostook County where he and several others from New Sharon had taken up land in the summer of 1861. Through his lifetime here he was one of the leading men in the community, always actively and intelligently interested in its development. In 1859, 1860 and 1861, he had attended Maine State Seminary in Lewiston, now Bates College. He also taught school terms both before and after his marriage, in New Sharon, Sidney and Perham.

He died Sept. 27, 1882, of cirrhosis of the liver. Was buried in the neighborhood burying-ground on the slope east of the Blackstone buildings. The town afterwards established a cemetery, "Fairview," on the northeast corner of his farm and bodies from all burial places were removed to it.

His son Fred succeeded him on the farm he had cleared and his descendants have lived there continuously. The present owner is Fred's oldest son, Charles Smith McIntire, whose son Charles Wilbur and family make the fourth and fifth generations of the name to live on the place.

*The township at this time was known only as "No. 14, Range 4, W.E.L.S." (West of the East Line of the State) which was simply a note of its location in the state survey. Letters were dated and addressed in that way until 1867 when it was organized into a plantation and given a name. For years after this, people in neighboring settlements still called it "Fourteen;" and also casually referred to Washburn - at first Salmon Brook Plantation - as "The Brook."

ELLA FLORIETTE MOODY

Robert Chandler and Hannah (Witham) Moody

Born New Portland, Me., Sept. 27, 1846.

Married Charles Smith McIntire. m. (2) Perham, Feb. 1892 William Emerson Miller, son of Welcome and Lucy Louisa (Clark) Miller, b. Webster, Mass., Sept. 28, 1855, d. Perham Mar. 16, 1937.

She lived during her childhood in New Portland and Kingfield, Me, going in 1863 with the family to Perham where she lived mostly until her second marriage. For some years then she lived in Everett, Mass., but in 1926 returned to her former home in Perham, then owned by the family of her son Fred.

She died there July 22, 1937. Throughout her long life she was a prominent figure in Perham.

Children (McIntire) b. Perham:

M. (2) Bangor, Me., June 5, 1937 by Rev. Ashley Smith, Mrs. Florence M. (Barrows) Everett, dau. of Hiram and Louise (Haskell) Barrows, b. 1881 Woodland, Me. He retired from farm in Perham, 1946, removed to Brewer, Me.

CAPT. HENRY McINTIRE, JR.

son of

Henry and Betsey (Hubbard) McIntire

Born in New Sharon, Maine, Nov. 19, 1814.

Married Sept. 19, 1838, Eunice Hill Field, Lewiston, Maine. (Marriage intention with family papers; Bible record in possession of Great-grandson Charles S. McIntire.)

He lived on the homestead near the five corners, East New Sharon. Was a prosperous farmer, adding largely to the land held by his father - upland, lowland, mowing-field and pasture. He was captain of a militia company, active in the affairs of the town and interested in questions of the day.*

He died of consumption Mar. 3, 1877; is buried in the cemetery in New Sharon, high above the bank of Sandy River. Within a few months after his death the place was sold and no one of the family ever lived there afterwards. It was sold a second time and later all the buildings burned to the ground: large, two-story house, three barns and many outbuildings. The very place where they stood is now forest - even the road that passed them.

*Among these was the "Washingtonian" temperance movement. It had been the custom to prepare for special work of the farm - hayin, raisings, etc. - by laying in a stock of rum. Henry and his wife had three growing boys and did not approve of this. When he took over the management of the place they decided not to provide rum for the next haying. His father stoutly protested that the work would never be done without it. However, plenty of cider was provided, made from their own apples and therefore harmless, and the haying was done; "Never so quick and so well."

EUNICE HILL FIELD

daughter of

Joseph and Elizabeth (Stevens) Field

Born Lewiston, Maine, Oct. 5, 1815

Married Sept. 19, 1838

Died Auburn, Me., Oct. 6, 1900, buried in New Sharon.

HENRY McINTIRE

son of

Jedediah and Lydia (Allen) McIntire

Born Jan. 23, 1782, York, Me., in locality known as Brixham. The house burned some years ago, struck by lightning.

He married, 1809, Betsey Hubbard, Fayette, Me.,
(Int. in town records.)

He lived in New Sharon,* Me., near the Vienna line, but evidently had gone first to Topsham. Kennebec Registry, Augusta, (Vol. V, 41 - 308) shows that Jedediah Whittier of Vienna sold to Henry McIntire of Topsham, Lincoln Co., for $700., "Lot No. 93 on the southerly side of Sandy River."

This deed was witnessed by Francis Hubbard and Moses Hoit Mar. 13, 1809; was recorded Feb. 22, 1822.

Henry lived to be 95. At about 80 he became blind from cataract on both eyes, with partial recovery later for a few years. In spite of this he was chatty and genial, and his great-grandchildren have a pleasant remembrance of him as "Blind Grandpa."

He died New Sharon Jan. 28, 1877. Data are from family statements, from records of Wesley McIntire and from personal knowledge and research.

*New Sharon was granted to Prince Baker, Pembroke, Mass., and others, in 1791. Baker was the earliest settler but others came so rapidly that it was incorporated 1794. This was part of an earlier grant to Capt. Tyng and his Company for service against the Indians in 1734; was first called Tyngstown and later, Unity. (Gazetteer of Maine, p. 391.)

*Tracts of land were often granted for miliary services or - in certain instances - for reparations. "It became the fashion," says one writer "to buy land in the wilderness of Me. for speculation." Inducements were made to settlers. The township of Corinna was sold in 1804 to Dr. John C. Warren "@ 2cts. per acre - $460.80." Dr. Warren was a noted surgeon, brother of Gen. Joseph Warren and head of the Boston hospital during the Revolutionary War.

LT. JOSEPH FIELD

son of

Samuel and Mary (Warren) Field

Born Gardiner, Me., 1749. (Pierce, Vol. 2, p. 970)

Married Eunice Hill

Lived in North Yarmouth, later in Lewiston

Died Mar. 27, 1815; is buried in the old Davis Cemetery, Lewiston

He was a farmer and tanner. The house - still standing on the upper Lisbon road - was built in 1785 and was occupied by his descendants well into the year 1924 when the movement of the city in that direction made it advisable to sell the estate. A section of it, looking toward the White Mts., and known as "Applesass Hill," was reserved and now belongs to the Stanton Bird Club, Lewiston.

His name appears on Mass. records as Revolutionary soldier, May 12, 1775. He fought at Bunker Hill, June 17, 1775; signed receipts for two months' pay, Cambridge, Feb. 20, 1776; marched Watertown to Dorchester Heights Mar. 1776, name appears June 13, 1776. Sent to Fishkill, he was captured by the British, Mar. 7, 1778, sent on prison ship to Bristol. June 11, 1778 he enlisted, North Yarmouth Corp. in Capt. Billings' Co., Col. Jonathan Bass' Regiment; held rank of Sgt. and 1st Lt. The date of his discharge is not known. "Was 5 ft. 9 in. tall, of light complexion."

It seems possible that at one time it was intended to remove the body of Lt. Field to the Davis lot in Riverside Cemetery, for his name is inscribed on the monument there with the statement: "He fought at Bunker Hill." A Field-Davis descendant, however, is of the opinion that that was meant only as a family memorial; for, though many bodies have been removed from Davis Cemetery, the graves of Lt. Field, his wife Eunice and several relatives have apparently never been disturbed.

EUNICE HILL

daughter of

Benjamin and Anna (Hayes) Hill

Born 1753

Micom and Dorothy (Pearce-McEnera) McIntire

Born York, Maine, 1677

Married before 1707 Susanna, dau. Dea. Rowland Young, York.

Died Dec. 2, 1771*

By his father's will, probated in 1705, he inherited the homestead, "both housing and land and fencing," etc., also additional land. He bought still more, including the piece on which was the Maxwell Garrison House, known since early 1700's as McIntire Garrison House and still standing. John's brother Alexander had died before his father and his brother Daniel never married; no mention is made of any daughters, so the descendants of Micom are from John and from his brother, Micom 2nd, who married Jane Grant and lived on the other side of York River. Davis refers to these as Clan A and Clan B respectively.

Early Gloucester records show the following among causes of death of its people: fits, "throat distemper", consumption, typhus fever, "mortification."

Among these, too, are many comments, such as: "d. on the town"; "d. at poorhouse" or "at workhouse". This is readily understood when one considers the number of Gloucester men every year lost at sea, with many families left in need and the aged without support.

MICOM McINTIRE

Born in Scotland: date not known, but between 1625 and 1635.

He was among thousands taken prisoner at the Battle of Dunbar in Sept. 1650, many of whom were deported by Cromwell to the American colonies. 150 of these, including Micom, sailed in ship Unity Nov. 11, 1650, landed in Boston Jan. 1651 and were bidden off for a term of seven years as indentured laborers, many being taken to Dover, N.H. and vicinity. Later he is noted as "Micome the Scotchman," a taxpayer in Dover.

Robert McIntire says: "Obviously the name was originally Malcolm, the English version of the Gaelic Calum. Micum is probably as near as the untutored town clerks could interpret the broad pronunciation of his own name." (Micum McIntire Family," p. 14). Several variations are found, Micom being the one adopted in these records as being slightly nearer the original name; also as the form used in the signature to his will.

He married in 1670 or 1671 Dorothy (Pearce) Mackenere (variously spelled) widow of Alexander McEnera, York, Maine; lived in York, in section even yet called Scotland. "On Sept. 4, 1671, Alexander Maxwell and his wife Anna deeded to Michum Mackintire of York a tract of upland whereon the sd Mackentyres house now standeth, formerly built by his predecessor Alexander Mackanare whose relict or Widdow hee since married." Between 1672 and 1700 Micom had at least five grants of land "additional to his father Pearce's land" which he inherited.

He died York, 1705, his will* probated Oct. 2 of that year. The homestead was willed to his son John and remains to the present in possession of his descendants. His grave is supposed to be in the burying-ground not far from the buildings, but is unmarked and has never been identified. A small wooden box shown in the Garrison House is believed to be the one in which Micom brought his few possessions to America.

*Robert McIntire gives this will entire and also gives interesting quotations from other McIntire wills.

DOROTHY PEARCE

Born 1635, shown by deposition. Only son.

Married Mary Cross, Wells, Nov. 1658

Lived Saco, Maine

Died 1696.

The Hill family was a prominent one in York Co., as shown in records of Wells, Kennebunk, Biddeford and Saco.

The following letter was written by Roger Hill, referred to as "Capt.", who was at that time in the garrison at Wells while his wife, to whom it was addressed, was in Saco:

"May 6, 1690.

The Indians have killed Goodman Frost and James Littlefield and carried away Nathaniel Frost and burnt several houses in Wells. I would have our son John hire a boat and bring you from Saco and some of our things if he possibly can. I fear it is not safe to come by land. John, be as careful as you can of your mother for it is very dangerous times. The Lord only knows whether we shall see one another any more.

Your loving husband till death,
Roger Hill."

REV. JOSHUA MOODY

son of

William and Sarah (- - - - -) Moody

Born in Ipswich, Suffolk, England, 1632 or 1633; came to America with his parents, 1634, who settled in Ipswich. He graduated from Harvard (A.B., A.M.) 1653; Fellow, Harvard, 1656-1658.

Married Mary dau. of Dea. Edward Collins, Cambridge.
(2) Mrs. Ann Jacobs.

Lived Portsmouth, N.H., 1658-1684, first minister of First Church; was ordained there July 12, 1671 - right hand of fellowship given by Rev. John Wheelwright (brother-in-law of Mrs. Anne Hutchinson).

Edward Cranfield, royal Gov. of the Province, (appointed 1682), had wide powers and took every means to tax and oppress the people. "Mr. Moody, the minister of Portsmouth, being a strong advocate of the cause of the people, was the object of his particular vengeance. Soon after the dissolution of the Lygonia Assembly, Cranfield signified his intention to partake of the Lord's supper on the next Sabbath and required Mr. Moody to administer it according to the liturgy. As Cranfield had foreseen, he refused to do so, never having been episcopally ordained."
(From "N.H. as It Is", E. A. Charlton, pp. 35, 36)

Mr. Moody was arrested, tried before a court formed by Cranfield and sentenced to a year's imprisonment. One sees that even if he had obeyed Cranfield the outcome would have been the same - upon charge of administering the sacrament without authority.

A note in N.H. Genealogical Records (Vol. 5, p. 84) says: "Thomas Edgerly came to America as early as 1635. Was one of the justices before whom Rev. Joshua Moody was tried for nonconformity, and soon after lost his commission for dissenting to the opinion of the majority of the court convicting Mr. Moody."

This was in 1684. Released from prison after some three months, upon condition that he preach no more in the Province (N.H.), Mr. Moody went to Boston May 3, 1684 and was Assistant to Rev. James Allen,* minister of the First Church. In Winsor's "Memorial History of Boston" (Vol. 1, p. 565) his name is given: "Joshua Moodey," in facsimile of signature, in list of clergy in Boston before 1700.

While there he was invited to become the second President of Harvard College, but declined. He was in Boston for about nine years before his championship of Philip English and wife, accused of witchcraft, "earned him both regard and criticism." He returned to Portsmouth 1693, Cranfield no longer being in office.

He died in Boston while on a visit. The "Journal" of Rev. John Pike, his son-in-law, says: "Rev. Joshua Moodey died of a wasting consumption about 5 in the afternoon, Sabbath Day July 4, 1697."

It is stated ("Colonial Clergy of N.E., p. 143) that 4070 of Mr. Moody's sermons are preserved at Mass. Historical Society. Besides preaching for regular services of worship, he seems to have been much in demand for special occasions: ordinations, Artillery elections, etc.

*"Rev. James Allen, an ejected minister, an Oxford Fellow, came to New England soon after the accession of Charles II."

Born in early 1600's

It is not known from where he came to New England. Was evidently married at the time.

He bought land in York, 1653, from Edward Rishworth; in 1660 sold part or all of the same. Was a fisherman.

In June 1666 was member of grand jury, York. Was bondsman in dispute between Maxwell and Mackenere (assault by Maxwell.)

In 1667 gave bond for Thos. Crawley who was drunk and beat his wife, "she being a weak ould woman." Was in same year convicted of drunkenness, fined 5 shillings.

Being Constable for S. Berwick, was fined 5 pounds for "great neglect if not contempt of authority."

Married (2) Phoebe Nash, widow of Isaac Nash

Date of death not known. They deeded land in 1670. Probably both were killed by Indians in the massacre of Jan. 1692 or died soon after. Estate inventoried by Matthew Austin and James Plaisted at £35-3-6.

WILLIAM MOODY

son of

Born in England, he came to America in 1634 with many other Nonconformists of that time. "Rev. Thomas Parker of Newbury, England, arrived in New England May 1634 in a company of about 100 persons; among them Richard Dummer and William Moody with wife and four sons." They came first to Ipswich but later settled in Newbury.

Married in Ipswich, England, Sarah - - - - - .

Was freeman in Ipswich, Mass., May 6, 1635. Was a sadler by trade. A man of influence in religious and general community affairs, among his descendants are many clergymen, educators and leaders in public questions of the day. "A family distinguished for its teachers."

Savage, Vol. 3, p. 226
Maine Genealogist and Biographer, Vol. 1, No.1, p. 10

Note: The story runs that a certain Edmund Moody in the reign of Henry VIII saved the life of the king who had become separated from his party and was in a highly dangerous situation. In recognition of this service, Henry made him a knight.

A Moody descendant, evidently no respecter of the merry king, remarks that this merciful deed on the part of Edmund is the only known blot upon his character.

*Rev. John Wheelwright, whose name appears so often in early New England records, was born in England about 1592; was graduated 1614 from Cambridge University. Was vicar of Bilsby, Lincolnshire, 1623-1631.

In 1636 he came to Mass. with his wife Marie and family, preached in Braintree and Boston. There he had part in the religious discussions held by Mrs. Anne Hutchinson, his sister-in-law, and like her, was banished from the Colony for heresy (Sept. 2, 1639).

He helped found Hampton and Exeter, N.H. and Wells, Me. His sentence having been revoked by the General Court, he returned to Salisbury where he was pastor from Dec. 9, 1662, to his death "of an apoplectic fit, Nov. 15, 1679, at an advanced age." (Salisbury V.R.)

Wheelwright and Anne Hutchinson "made a struggle for intellectual freedom against the authority of the church."

Salisbury V.R.
notes by W. W. Woodman

Cutter ("Boston and Eastern Mass.") says that the name Onesiphorus was from the Marsh family.

It was evidently seldom used even at that time and the accent being upon the third syllable - "siph" - it was often misunderstood and variously mis-spelled. It is given as "Sephrus," "Severance" and - in a military list - "Sefrus" Page. The same list shows Reuben Whittier as "Rubin Whitcher."

*"It is customary to sneer at the Puritans because of the delusion of witchcraft by which some were obsessed. It may be remembered that only a few people in the then small village of Salem were thus affected; that but nineteen people lost their lives as bewitched, and that not a single person was actually burned. At the same time and later, the delusion was widespread in Europe and other regions, where thousands were burned alive."

THOMAS WITHAM

The date and place of his birth are not known, nor the time when he came to America. Records of Gloucester, Mass., where he lived do not state whether he was married before coming there.

1653 is given as the year of his death.

The History of Gloucester, and vital records of the town, show a great number of the Witham name - so many that one may wonder if all were descended from this man and the one son recorded; but the entries themselves seem to confirm it and show the large families in the generations of some 200 years.

These records, though in general quite clearly stated, are hard to interpret. Each family of descendants apparently had one or more of the names: Thomas, Henry, Zebulon, William, Joseph, Rebecca, Sarah, with quite a sprinkling of John and Samuel.

Much careful and persistent study and consideration have been required in tracing the line from William of Poland, Me., (p. 28) to the ancestor whose name heads this page. The task would have been impossible without the dates which are so generally given.

WIFE OF THOMAS WITHAM

EDWARD COLCORD

Born in England, 1614 or 1615, came to America 1629 or 1631.

Was in Dover 1642, Hampton 1645.

"Was in many lawsuits." Overlapping grants of land in America to proprietors in England were of frequent occurrence and led to many conflicting claims of settlers, to be decided only by lawsuit.

In this connection see George Cleeves, p. 1598, founder of Portland, Me., who is said to have been in this same period "always in controversy."

Died

GEORGE CLEEVES

George Cleeves, born in England around 1575-8 is called the founder of Portland, Me., as shown by a monument in his honor, which stands on Eastern Promenade in that city.

Temporary settlements had been made earlier but in 1630 Richard Tucker established himself at the mouth of the Spurwink River, Cape Elizabeth, and was joined the same year by Cleeves. They erected buildings and had carried on business for about two years when they were evicted by John Winter, agent of parties in England (Robert Trelawney and Moses Goodyeare) who had a grant of land from the Council of Plymouth, England.

Cleeves and Tucker went to ano'her location on north side of Casco or Fore River and in 1632 laid the foundations of the first settlement upon the Neck (Cleeves Neck, Munjoy Neck, Falmouth Neck) now Portland. They carried on business together for many years, Cleeves managing the land speculations and Tucker the trading operations.

There were overlapping claims to lands in the vicinity and Cleeves seems to have had difficulty in establishing title, going to England at least once to obtain deed to large tracts in dispute. In 1650 he conveyed Peak's Island to Michael Mitton.

Was married before leaving England.

Died between 1665 and 1671, "over 90 yrs. old."

Early names of Portland were Machigonne, Casco, Falmouth.

The settlement was destroyed by Indians in 1676 and 1690, but was resettled and, in 1719, organized into the town of Falmouth. In 1775, it was almost completely destroyed by the British fleet, and on July 4 and 5, 1866 fire consumed nearly a third of the city. Portland was the first capital of Maine - 1820 to 1831.

CAPT MYLES STANDISH

Born in England, came to American on the Mayflower, 1620.

Married in England, Rose - - - - - who died in Plymouth "in the first sickness," Jan. 29, 1620/21.
(2) Barbara - - - - -

Lived Plymouth, went to Duxbury. Was the military leader and a prominent man in the colony.

Died Oct. 3, 1656.

N. E. Gen. Reg. (V. 87, p. 152) corrects statement 1655 given by the Mayflower Descendant (V. 1, p. 13). Gen. Reg., same place, gives further details about Myles Standish, his children and grandchildren.

Further information about Myles Standish will be found in general and historical libraries. His first house in Duxbury was burned but The Standish House, built by his son Alexander, is still standing (1949) on his farm in Duxbury where he went in 1630. (Mitchell's History of Bridgewater, p. 307.) Near by, on "Captain's Hill," is the Standish monument which overlooks Duxbury Bay and the town of Plymouth.

NATHANIEL STEVENS

Data are not in hand to show the parentage of this man or anything of his life beyond his marriage in July 1776 to Tabitha (i. e. Dorcas), daughter of Jedediah Soule. This marriage is recorded as in Duxbury, Mass., and also North Yarmouth, Maine, but was no doubt in North Yarmouth where Jedediah had gone when a quite young man. (See p. 44). These names, as well as Mitchell, Bishop, and others were—and are—found in both places.

It seems that Nathaniel must have died comparatively young, for I never heard his granddaughter Eunice Field McIntire (who was my grandmother) or any other relative mention him. His widow, Dorcas, evidently remarried, for she was occasionally referred to as "Grandmother Morrison."

It is true that "Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors" (p. 976) gives the name Nathaniel Stevens three times, but whether this refers to one and the same man, I do not know. All are given as from New Gloucester, a town adjoining (and perhaps a part of) the region then called North Yarmouth, in distinction from Yarmouth, Massachusetts. This tract included the present Yarmouth, North Yarmouth, Freeport, and Pownal. One of these records mentions the item of "mileage from North Yarmouth," where presumably this ancester lived.

At the time my records were assembled I did not have opportunity to follow up this family line and because it seemed simpler than some other matters I had turned to them first. Later I put it into the hands of one who was doing such research and had had more experience than I; but this brought no results.

Savage (I believe) states that a Nathaniel Stevens was born 1680, son of Richard Stevens, one of the inhabitants of Taunton, "to whom William Bradford made confirmation." Taunton vital records show the name of Richard, four sons—including Nathaniel (born 1680) and two daughters. Many of the Stevens name are found in records of near-by towns of the colony, who might well be descendants of the above Richard. I venture the opinion that among these one is most likely to find the direct ancestors of our Nathaniel; especially when it is remembered that the part of Maine previously mentioned was part of the grant to Plymouth Colony and was largely settled by families from its towns.

Whether or not my opinion is correct, it is now too late for further study of the matter on my part; but I hope that some descendant—and they are many—of the Nathaniel Stevens mentioned in these pages will pick up the thread and trace his parentage back to the first of the line (whether Richard or some other) who came to these shores.
